Regular (core) resources form the bedrock of UNDP, and hence are vital to support our work to eradicate poverty and reduce inequalities and exclusion around the world. Regular resources allows UNDP to allocate funds where they are needed most, respond flexibly to crisis, serve as the backbone of UN system coordination, and maintain the high standards of quality assurance and transparency that are crucial for the effective management of development funds.

Fifty-three partners contributed to UNDP's core resources in 2016. The core resources for 2016 amounts to USD 619 million (USD 618 million if factoring in adjustments and contributions intended for other years).
