Guinea-Bissau has so far thirty three confirmed cases of COVID-19 while cases have been reported in all neighboring countries. The pandemic, which accentuates the fragility of the public service provision to the citizens is intertwined with a political crisis following contested results of the Presidential elections.

The two crises closely interact with each other: The state of emergency declared due to the pandemic opens up the possibility to further weaken the only nascent rule of law. The socio-economic consequences may be devastating. With weak institutional capacity to respond to both crises at the same time, trust in government, formal institutions and the media is seemingly declining.

The outbreak has the potential to quickly overwhelm the scarce national health and law enforcement institutions that lack basic infrastructure, personnel, supplies and operational capacities.

The risk is that we will see not only a rise in mortality in the short term due to the COVID outbreak, but a shift in the Bissau-Guinean social fabric with a strain on social cohesion and on the feeble relationship between the state and its citizens.

Being highly dependent on the export of a single crop (cashew) and importing all basic necessities, border closures, quarantines, and market, supply chain and trade disruptions will restrict people’s access to sufficient and diverse sources of food and basic needs.

The CO is therefore developing a response to mitigate the negative effects of COVID-19 that considers strategic local action and a focus on the furthest left behind, while keeping in mind national development goals and long-term recovery scenarios.

UNDP is a partner for the implementation of the National Contingency Plan, assisting in equipping the health centers across the country, while making procurement capabilities available and equipping the UN clinic to meet the needs of UN personnel for medical services, supporting an inclusive and integrated crisis management system, leading the socio-economic impact analysis and collaborating with other agencies to the national communication response plan.
