With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

* Based solely on the context of UN Security Council Resolution 1244 (1999).

HIGHLIGHTS FOR 2011

UNDP sent 13 experts to help the country get back on its feet as the transitional authority and civil society began recovery and stabilization programmes following Gadafi’s ouster.

With UNDP support over 1,600 landmine victims with disabilities received prosthetic devices such as artificial limbs, as well as maintenance of these devices, physiotherapy, walking aids and vocational training services.

With help from UNDP, 50 political parties engaged in dialogue that helped to secure a consensus-based transition in the run-up to the country’s 2011 Constituent Assembly elections, after the previous government was deposed.

UNDP supported “gun free zones” have led to sharp reductions in crime and violence. In one municipality a 40 percent reduction in homicides was recorded in 2011 and an average of 12 percent reduction of murder rates could be seen across 20 of the most violent cities.

By the end of the year, 78 percent of these cases came before the courts (547 out of 700 cases were heard), and 27 percent were completed.

UNDP sent 13 experts to help the country get back on its feet as the transitional authority and civil society began recovery and stabilization programmes following Gadafi’s ouster.

UNDP support to the peace process over the last decade has seen local and national institutions identify 5,400 cases of disappearances and help these citizens access to justice for 27,442 victims.

Through a US$ 1.2 million UNDP-supported recovery plan, close to 40,000 people have had their homes, livelihoods and community infrastructure rebuilt or repaired following severe flooding.

With UNDP help, and the establishment of “Saturday Courts”, the backlog of cases, there has been an increase in the number of sexual and gender-based violence cases that were heard in 2011. By the end of the year, 78 percent of these cases came before the courts (547 out of 700 cases were heard), and 27 percent were completed.

With UNDP support, hundreds of thousands of lives were saved and a more serious crisis averted during the Horn of Africa drought.

With UNDP support to mobile courts and legal aid centres, 193 members of the police and army were convicted of mass rapes and crimes against humanity.

Through a US$ 1.2 million UNDP-supported recovery plan, close to 40,000 people have had their homes, livelihoods and community infrastructure rebuilt or repaired following severe flooding.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

In 2011, more than 2 million workdays were generated by UNDP in Haiti, employing over 30,000 people to remove and recycle debris, restore shelters, construct gabions to prevent floods, plant trees to reduce wind speed, and other activities in disaster management and labor intensive works.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With UNDP support to the interim government in establishing mechanisms for conflict mitigation and mediation the parliamentary election in 2011 was peaceful.

With UNDP support over 1,600 landmine victims with disabilities received prosthetic devices such as artificial limbs, as well as maintenance of these devices, physiotherapy, walking aids and vocational training services.

Because of UNDP supported early warning and evacuation systems, no lives were lost when a powerful earthquake hit Aceh province in January 2012.

UNDP’s back-up emergency employment labour, 526 km of roads; 390 bridges; 4,012 drinking water facilities; 60 km of water courses; and 5,812 disaster resilient and energy efficient houses have been rebuilt or repaired, benefitting 1.2 million flood affected people.

UNDP supported “gun free zones” have led to sharp reductions in crime and violence. In one municipality a 40 percent reduction in homicides was recorded in 2011 and an average of 12 percent reduction of murder rates could be seen across 20 of the most violent cities.

With UNDP support to government mine removal activities, over 398,000 internally displaced people have now been able to return home since the end of the fighting in 2009.

UNDP supported emergency employment labour, 526 km of roads; 390 bridges; 4,012 drinking water facilities; 60 km of water courses; and 5,812 disaster resilient and energy efficient houses have been rebuilt or repaired, benefitting 1.2 million flood affected people.

UNDP’s back-up emergency employment labour, 526 km of roads; 390 bridges; 4,012 drinking water facilities; 60 km of water courses; and 5,812 disaster resilient and energy efficient houses have been rebuilt or repaired, benefitting 1.2 million flood affected people.

UNDP supported “gun free zones” have led to sharp reductions in crime and violence. In one municipality a 40 percent reduction in homicides was recorded in 2011 and an average of 12 percent reduction of murder rates could be seen across 20 of the most violent cities.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With UNDP support to the interim government in establishing mechanisms for conflict mitigation and mediation the parliamentary election in 2011 was peaceful.

With UNDP help, and the establishment of “Saturday Courts”, the backlog of cases, there has been an increase in the number of sexual and gender-based violence cases that were heard in 2011. By the end of the year, 78 percent of these cases came before the courts (547 out of 700 cases were heard), and 27 percent were completed.

With UNDP supported “gun free zones” have led to sharp reductions in crime and violence. In one municipality a 40 percent reduction in homicides was recorded in 2011 and an average of 12 percent reduction of murder rates could be seen across 20 of the most violent cities.

With UNDP support to government mine removal activities, over 398,000 internally displaced people have now been able to return home since the end of the fighting in 2009.

With UNDP support to the justice system helped over 17,000 people receive legal aid through clinics in areas as diverse as domestic violence, family law and property law.

UNDP support to the justice system helped over 17,000 people receive legal aid through clinics in areas as diverse as domestic violence, family law and property law.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With UNDP support over 1,600 landmine victims with disabilities received prosthetic devices such as artificial limbs, as well as maintenance of these devices, physiotherapy, walking aids and vocational training services.

With UNDP support to government mine removal activities, over 398,000 internally displaced people have now been able to return home since the end of the fighting in 2009.

UNDP’s back-up emergency employment labour, 526 km of roads; 390 bridges; 4,012 drinking water facilities; 60 km of water courses; and 5,812 disaster resilient and energy efficient houses have been rebuilt or repaired, benefitting 1.2 million flood affected people.

Because of UNDP supported early warning and evacuation systems, no lives were lost when a powerful earthquake hit Aceh province in January 2012.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

UNDP support to the justice system helped over 17,000 people receive legal aid through clinics in areas as diverse as domestic violence, family law and property law.

With UNDP help, and the establishment of “Saturday Courts”, the backlog of cases, there has been an increase in the number of sexual and gender-based violence cases that were heard in 2011. By the end of the year, 78 percent of these cases came before the courts (547 out of 700 cases were heard), and 27 percent were completed.

With UNDP support to government mine removal activities, over 398,000 internally displaced people have now been able to return home since the end of the fighting in 2009.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

With UNDP support to government mine removal activities, over 398,000 internally displaced people have now been able to return home since the end of the fighting in 2009.

UNDP support to the justice system helped over 17,000 people receive legal aid through clinics in areas as diverse as domestic violence, family law and property law.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

UNDP support to the justice system helped over 17,000 people receive legal aid through clinics in areas as diverse as domestic violence, family law and property law.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With UNDP support to national disaster observatory the government has reduced potential disaster losses and is able to better plan for earthquake risk.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.

With help from UNDP, 1,500 former paramilitary fighters had been successfully demobilized by 2011 and integrated into civilian society.