

Regular (core) resource contributors for 2015

Regular (core) resources form the bedrock of UNDP, and hence are vital to support our work to eradicate poverty and reduce inequalities and exclusion around the world. Regular resources allows UNDP to allocate funds where they are needed most, respond flexibly to crisis, serve as the backbone of UN system coordination, and maintain the high standards of quality assurance and transparency that are crucial for the effective management of development funds.

Fifty-one partners contributed to UNDP's core resources in 2015. The core resources for 2015 amounts to USD 663 million (USD 704 million if including contributions intended for other years).
