Development Challenges

The devastating impact of Cyclone Kenneth in the Province of Cabo Delgado in 2019 had severe human, social and economic cost for the country. Community livelihoods, infrastructure and services were damaged or destroyed exposing underlying vulnerabilities that already existed before the disaster. Combined with root causes of vulnerability such as poverty, inequality and poor basic services, the province of Cabo Delgado has been recently observing increasing levels of violence in its rural districts and villages. While localized for now, the risk of insurgence and violence spread country-wide shall not be underestimated which can, ultimately, undermine national efforts towards peace consolidation, social stabilisation and economic recovery. If not addressed, the COVID-19 pandemic can impose additional challenges that can fuel violence and conflict in the region.
