IEBC uses comedy and music to reach out to youthful and first time voters

As part of IEBC's drive to net more voters during the just concluded voter registration campaign, the electoral board engaged in innovative ways to sensitize the youth including first time voters, through comedy and music to evoke a sense of patriotism and why Kenyan youth should care enough to participate in the upcoming general elections of August 8 2017. Through a special comedy show "Churchill Live: Patriotic edition" the audience was treated to humorous satirical presentations that highlighted Kenyan's uniqueness reminding the audience to be proud citizens who engage in democratic processes by participating in electoral processes and electing leaders of their choice, rather than lament over leadership that is not in touch with their needs and priorities.
